HOGWARTS UNDERGOES MYSTERIOUS TRANSFORMATION!

Castle corridors rearranged overnight! Ministry officials deny involvement.

Students and faculty awoke this morning to discover that the halls of Hogwarts School of Witchcraft and Wizardry had undergone a rather extraordinary transformation!

New chambers have appeared, corridors have been reorganized, and previously overlooked gathering spaces have been opened to the student body.

Hogwarts Administration confirms these changes are part of an extensive effort to improve castle life. Perhaps most excitingly, the four House Common Rooms are now accessible to their respective students!

THE FOUR HOUSES AWAIT YOU!

> "One student, one House! I shall not tolerate indecisive witches and wizards attempting to occupy four Common Rooms at once!" – The Sorting Hat

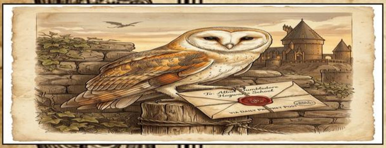
Students must first visit the Sorting Ceremony to officially declare their House allegiance.

Each Common Room offers distinct enchantments, ancient house pride, and dedicated gathering halls.

OWL POST OFFICE ANNOUNCES NEW DELIVERY SYSTEM!

Unnecessary owl traffic expected to decline dramatically.



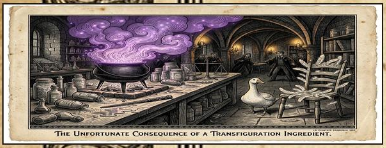
In a revolutionary advancement in magical communication, Hogwarts Administration has introduced a new system allowing students to choose which official notices they receive.

Students may now register for specific announcements, including castle maintenance, development news, community notices, school events, and roleplay activities.

The system was reportedly developed following numerous complaints about excessive owl deliveries.

POTIONS CLASS ENDS IN UNEXPECTED DISASTER

Moonstone confused with ordinary baking flour



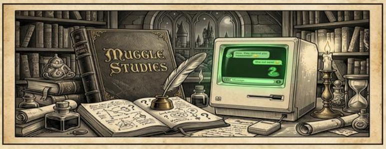
The Unfortunate Consequence of a Transfiguration Ingredient.

A routine brewing exercise took an unfortunate turn yesterday when an unidentified student allegedly confused powdered moonstone with ordinary baking flour.

The resulting potion produced a thick cloud of violet smoke, caused several cauldrons to sing in harmony, and temporarily turned a classroom chair into a rather irritated goose. The professor has declined to comment. The goose has reportedly requested a transfer to Hufflepuff.

MUGGLE STUDIES: THE MYSTERY OF THE 'DISCORD'

Professor baffled by peculiar Muggle communication invention.



Hogwarts' Muggle Studies department has reportedly begun investigating a curious invention known as Discord.

According to preliminary findings, this extraordinary device allows Muggles to communicate instantly across enormous distances without the assistance of owls, Floo Powder, or enchanted mirrors.

Even more astonishing, users apparently communicate using tiny pictures called emojis. One professor was particularly disturbed to discover that a simple green snake ▯ could communicate one's House allegiance.

'Extraordinary! They have managed to invent a form of magical correspondence without possessing an ounce of magic!' The Department of Magical Accidents and Catastrophes has advised students against attempting to cast Reparo on malfunctioning Muggle computers.

QUIDDITCH PRACTICE - INTERRUPTED BY UNIDENTIFIED FLYING OBJECT

A MYSTERIOUS DISRUPTION: An Enchanted Satchel Unleashes Chaos during Quidditch Practice!

An afternoon training session was abruptly interrupted when students reported a mysterious object soaring across the Quidditch pitch.

Witnesses initially believed the object to be a rogue Bludger. Further investigation revealed it was a student's enchanted schoolbag, apparently attempting to escape an unfinished Potions assignment.

The bag was eventually recovered near the Owlery. No injuries were reported, although three essays remain missing.

THIS DAY IN WIZARDING HISTORY

October 22, 1707: The first recorded official appearance of a Boggart was documented by the Department of Magical Creatures, establishing essential protective guidelines for young witches and wizards.

DID YOU KNOW? HOGWARTS LORE

The castle's grand staircases move according to an ancient harmonic enchantment placed by Rowena Ravenclaw herself. Exactly one hundred and forty-two flights of stairs connect the towers to the dungeons.
